DEADLOCK FOLLOWS AS A RESULT OF REICH ELECTIONS

Dr. Breitscheid Says Acceptance of the Experts' Report Is Guaranteed

By HOWARD SIEPEN By Special Cable

BERLIN, May 6—Now the elections to the new Reichstag are over, either the Social Democrats or the Pan-Germans will be asked by the President to form a new Government, according to which party is strongest in the Reich-The Social Democrats, The Christian Science Monitor correspondent learns, feel very little inclination at present to undertake this arduous task, which will then fall to the Pan-Germans. The latter demand the ex-odus of the Democrats from the Government, and insist upon naming the Chancellor, and also claim the portfolio of the Minister of Foreign Affairs, the Monitor representative was

3. New elections.

A revival of the coalition, in which Gustav Stresemann and Rudolf Breitscheld are leading figures, it appears, would be shipwrecked on the rocks of nationalist opposition.

President Coalition Weakened

Whether the present coalition can continue successfully in office in its present weakened condition is also doubtful. Its existence would depend entirely upon the Social Democrats. Nevertheless it might hold out until the legislation for the experts' scheme was passed by the Reichstag.

Regarding the influence the elections might exercise on Germany's attitude toward the experts' report, Dr. Breit-scheld, who was returned to the Reich-stag and who is one of the leaders of the Social Democrats, told the Monitor correspondent that "the acceptance of the experts' report by Germany is guaranteed. The Pan-Germans will vote for it if they enter the Government. If not another party com-bination will be found which will do

This is of importance regarding the labor question and the regarding the labor question and others, in which these parties are opposed to the Conservatives.

Attitude of Pan-Germans

The attitude the Pan-Germans would adopt toward the experts' report if they entered the Government was cautiously described to the Monitor correspondent by Herr von Lindeiner, one of their chief leaders, as follows: "We believe the present Government had no right, according to the Consti-tution, to enter into a binding international commitment, and we hold that the commitments, if entered into,

are not so very binding.

COMPROMISE PLAN ON TAX BILL HINTED

Mellon Measure Gets Setback as Democrats Win 40 Per Cent Surtax by Coalition

Special from Monitor Bureau WASHINGTON, May 6-The Mellon crats and insurgent Republicans in the Senate 'yesterday adopted the sub-stitute offered by Furnifold Simmons (D.), Senator from North Carolina. Not only does this mean that it will be the Democratic tax revision plan in its essentials that will be passed by Congress, but it marks again decisively that the coalition strength in the Senate is sufficient to control all important legislation.

Those who look upon the brighter side of the tax situation, however, point with significance to the report that "regular" Senate Republicans agreed at a parley today to seek some sort of a compromise on the Democratic surtax rates. cratic surtax rates.

The surtax rates graduated up to 40 per cent were substituted for the Mellon maximum rate of 25 per cent and following this the Simmons rates on normal incomes were adopted by a vote of 44 to 37.

The normal rates accepted were 2 per cent on the first $4000 of income; 4 per cent on the second $4000 and 6 per cent on all above $8000. This compares with the present rates of 4 per cent on the first $4000 and 8 per cent above that amount.

Reed Smoot (R.), Senator from Utah, was the only Senator who defended the Mellon rates of 3 per cent on incomes under $4000 and 6 per cent on those above that amount. Wesley L. Jones (R.), Senator from Washington, refrained from voting on the ground that he would have a personal pecuniary interest in the legislation. Sena-tor Smoot stated that he still has some hope of getting a compromise on the surtax rates when the bill goes from the committee of the whole to the Senate,

Under the Simmons amendment, the surtax begins upon net incomes in excess of $10,000. Up to $14,000 the tax is 1 per cent of such excess. The sur-tax then increases by 1 per cent for each additional $2000 net income until it reaches 40 per cent for net incomes in excess of $500,000. This rate is lower than that now in effect which begins with 1 per cent surtax on net incomes of $6000 and graduates as high as 50 per cent on net incomes exceeding $200,000. It approximates the surtax rate adopted by the House, which being 11% per by the House, which being 1½ per cent at $10,000 and graduates to 37½ per cent for net incomes exceeding $200,000. Plea to President Coolidge Is Proposed-Negro Bishops in Northern Cities Urged

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 6-Introduction of a resolution protesting to President Coolidge against the Japanese exclusion act, a plea for establishment of Negro bishops in northern cities and proposed indorsement of the Sterling-Reed educational bill in Congress, were prominent features in today's session of the Methodist Gen-

The most eloquent moments of de-bate at the conference came when Dr. Lorenzo H. King, editor of a Negro religious journal, made a powerful ap-peal to meet the tremendous migration of southern Negroes northward. He

We are not concerned in obtaining any larger proportion of Negro bishops, we are not unmindful of what the Des Moines general conference did when they placed hands of consecration on two sons of slave mothers, giving them equal authority with other bishops of the greatest Protestant force in America. We can never forget the honor that thus came to a backward race but 50 years out of slavery, we are not selfish in asking for bishops for the north. Our people gave $1,750,000 to the great centenary movement, stinting the education of our own boys and girls. All the Negrobes in all the other churches combined have not equaled that record. This money did not come from homes of wealth, but from over the wash board, the ironing board, in the swainps, bayous and turpentine camps. Within recent months more than 500,000 abandoned the south. The African Methodist church has 18 bishops who are handling, molding and conserving thousands of Negroes who have come to the northland.

Elmer L. Kidney of Pittsburgh, an attorney, objected to the immediate passage of the resolution and it was referred to the committee on the Episcopacy, for more deliberate consideration

Reviving the most bitter fight of the last general conference Judge Henry Wade Rogers, chairman of the com-mittee on Episcopacy, asked the con-ference whether it desired reference of the question of a doctrinal test to the committee on judiciary. Four years ago, in an effort to free the church from the requirement of as-senting to the 25 articles of religion upon joining the church, both the majority and minority reports were de feated and the requirement for doc-trinal assent was retained. Judge Rogers insists that this requirement is a violation of the constitution of the church. The matter will be before the conference for fuller debate later. "Avoid glorification of war and teach reliance on justice instead of passion and force," was the substance of a resolution presented this morning by Dr. John H. An eloquent appeal for more religious training in the public schools by Mrs. Anna Steese Richardson of Woman's Home Companion was the outstanding feature of a banquet last evening. "Do you realize that in this country 27,000,000 boys and girls are receiving no systematic moral or religious training?" asked Mrs. Richardson, adding:

What sort of men and women do you think will come from such schools? The corrupt politicians of tomorrow and wives who would rather their husbands were rich than right tomorrow and wives who would take their husbands were rich than right, who will demand wealth and luxury at any cost of integrity.

You have been shocked at corrup-

You have been shocked at corruption in high places, you must look far beyond and behind politics to the schools in which our boys are being trained to be successful at any price. When I went to the normal school, 3000 of us girls gathered every morning in the assembly room to hear an instructor read part of a chapter from the Bible. Then we sang a hymn. No one questioned this. Jews and Gentiles, Catholics and Protestants, we were American children, attending an thes, Catholics and the God of our fathers who founded this Nation was fathers who founded among us.

Today the Jewish children receive religious training in their church classes after school hours. Carholic children receive religious instruction in parochial schools. Only the Gentile, the Protestant child, receives no religious or moral training of any sort in school. The desire to obey the law must come from within. This organization has a slosan. CURTIS GATEWAY

Defendants Granted Time on Tribute Paid to Former Police Commissioner of Boston

A gathering of several hundred persons, addresses that paid tribute to a man devoted to public service, and simple but impressive ceremony were features of the unveiling and dedication exercises of the memorial to Edwin U. Curtis, former Mayor of Boston, Boston Police Commissioner, who also served in several other public offices, including assistant United States Treasurer. The memorial overlooks the Charles River Basin from the Esplanade at Clarendon Street, and is in the form of a monumental gateway, with flanking seats.

The program included addresses by Governor Cox and Mayor Curley, readof a letter from President Coolidge, and a tribute to Mr. Curtis by Kenneth C. M. Sills, president of Bowdoin College, of which Mr. Curtis was a graduate. Presentation of the memorial was made by Samuel D. Parker, chairman of the memorial committee and man of the memorial committee, and its acceptance by James A. Bailey, chairman of the Metropolitan District Commission. The concluding number on the program was the playing of the "Star-Spangled Banner" by the Traffic Squad Band of the Boston Police Department.

Besides Mr. Parker, the committee in charge included: Arthur B. Chapin, treasurer; and James B. Noyes, secre-tary; who, together with William M. Butler, Louis A. Coolidge, Herbert D. Parker and Henry Parkman, constituted the executive committee.

Guy Lowell was chosen architect and the Charles River Basin Espla nade seemed an especially appropriate site for the memorial in view of the in its development while serving as a member of the Metropolitan Park Commission. STATE DRY CHIEF ANSWERS SUMMONS

Seen Entering Federal Grand Jury Room-League Recently Filed Harris Charges at Capital

Among those who entered the federal grand jury room at the Federal Building today was William M. Forgrave, state superintendent of the Massachusetts Anti-Saloon League. The league has filed charges at Washington concerning the conduct of the office of Robert O. Harris, U. S. Attorney at Boston, and last week Mr. Forgrave received a summons from the U.S. District Court to appear at the Federal Building today in connection with the case of the United States vs. "certain unknown persons alleged to have violated the laws of the United jury room two and one half hours later.

Charges of inefficiency in Mr. Harris' office at Boston have been flied with Henry Cabot Lodge, United States Senator from Massachusetts, and with Harlan F. Stone, United States Attorney-General, by the Mas-sachusetts Anti-Saloon League and others.

Charges filed at Washington relate to the reported disappearance of $250,000 worth of seized liquors that were in the Massachusetts Storage Warehouse, the Government depository in Boston, which it is charged has not been denied by Mr. Harris or United States Marshal William J Keville, who is responsible for the safekeeping of liquor confiscated by federal agents in this district.

These charges further set forth that Boston is responding to the plea for there was disclosed a wide discrep-ne welfare of Negro children in the Saloon League claimed to possess, 315 bottles of whisky were never accounted for and furthermore, according to reports, some of the institutions and firms listed as having received l'quor deny they received it.

Remove the Film

Film should be removed-that viscous film you feel. Under oldway cleaning methods, much of its clings and stays. Film becomes discolored, then forms dingy, clinging coats. That is why so many teeth look cloudy. Dental science has now found effective film removers. One disintegrates the film at all stages of formation. One removes it without harmful scouring. Able authorities have proved these methods effective. A newtype tooth paste has been created to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent.

Protect the Enamel

Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

WOMEN'S POLL TAX ABOLITION SOUGHT IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

CONCORD, N. H., May 6 (Special)— The New Hampshire Tax Collectors Association, at a meeting scheduled for Wednesday at the State House is expected to adopt a resolution in favor of the abolition of the woman's poll tax which has been levied since woman suffrage went into effect. The reason to be advanced for this action is that experience over a period action is that experience over a period of years has demonstrated the impracticability of actually collecting these taxes. Arthur J. Beaudet, tax collector of Manchester, and a member of the associations' legislative committee, informed The Christian Science Monitor representative that 11,000 taxpayers in his city have refused or failed to pay their poll taxes for 1923, and a large number of these collection is difficult.

In the last political campaign the Democratic party advocated the abolition of women's poll taxes and in the legislature, the House of Representatives, controlled by the Democrats, passed a repeal of the poll tax law. But the Senate, with a Republican mapority killed the bill. Gov. Fred H. Brown is a strong advocate of abolition. There is some sentiment among tax officials in favor of poll taxes on both sexes being abolished.

NAVY AUCTIONS SURPLUS SUPPLIES

About 300 Buyers Attend Sale in Charlestown Yard

About 400 lots of surplus navy supplies and articles condemned by the Navy Department were auctioned today at the Charlestown Navy Yard supply building.

The auction began at 11 a. m., under the direction of J. F. Conant, Lowell auctioneer, with nearly 300 persons present. The first material offered comprised 195 lots of miscellaneous supplies. At the early offerings about 125 persons were active bidders.

This afternoon 66,000 pounds of scrapped brass and a quantity of small-arm cartridge cases, stored at the Hingham Ammunition Depot, were for 1923, and a large number of these are women in well-to-do familles. He said that as long as police officers were detailed to work under him and nickel castings, all of which are in the collection of these taxes, he had stored in the Fore River shipyards, fair success in getting the money but now, without the help of the police, powder tanks, at the Hingham ammunition depot.

story that stays always in the realm of imagination.

For a while, at the beginning, just to introduce the audience to the ancient city of Bagdad, the action stays on the ground, like an airplane getting under way. But soon the Thief leaves his pilferings in the bazaars and at the public fountain, and slips into the caliph's palace. Here the Thief gets the first glimmer of the idea that is to urge him on his Aladdin-like adventures—"happiness cannot be stolen, it must be earned." It was with the aid of a magic rope stolen from a wandering troupe of allusionists that he was able to scale the high walls of the palace. He slips through the shadows of the great halls and comes at last to the treasure room adjoining the Princess' chamber. These rooms have been visualized by artists.

For the final week of the Boston engagement at the Shubert Theater of the Chauve-Souris. Balleff and his singers, funmakers and dancers have returned to the bill which they originally presented in Boston. Many persons will like again to see this, the best off all the entertainments that this talented Russian troupe has presented during its American visit, and those who have yet to see them are fortunate in having an opportunity to see the parade of the Light takes its rightful place as the Light takes its rightful place as the chief decorative and dramatic element in the backgrounds. Working at night, when there may be perfect control of lighting, the scenes were realized in the frue modern vein of photography, starting with darkness and letting in illumination where it will be most effective. Silhouette effects are used frequently, as in the great ornamental grills in arched doors. Stairways take on the alriness of a dream when they are made to see them are fortunate in having an opportunity to see the parade of the wooden soldiers, a night at Yards', Katinka, the song of the Voiga boatmen, see-saw, the minuet, the Copenhagen fantasy, the Italian opera burlesque and half a dozen others, each a model of its sort.

Even the very walls of the palace seem about to be detached of the palace seem about to be detached from the earth and float away, for the streets of this spotless city of Bagdad are of a polished black that gives a hazy look to the foundations of the buildings. The Thief pauses in the midst of his plundering of the Princess' jewel chest when he hears the plaintive strumming of a lute in the next rom. He slips in and there sees the Princess slumbering in a chamber such as never existed out-"The Gay Lord Quey."

St. James Theater

It was almost as if the small-town vestrymen, from Morton Jones to Dr. Andrew Cobb, and all the other characters who so impressed themselves upon audiences at the Hollis Street Theater a few months ago in the presentation. Theater a few months ago in the presentation of "Thank You," had returned to the St. James last night to repeat their earlier success. There was nothing lackings either in color, rendition, or settings, to complete the illusion. The piece is well adapted to the talents of the members of the St. James players, and is one in which there can be a perfect blending of their adaptable personalities. Mr. Gilbert was plausible and convincing in the part-of David Lee, the meek but eloquent friend of everybody. Miss Mason, as his niece, Diane, was, as always, charming and true to her part.

retold. It appeals to any New Engla audience peculiarly, perhaps because the scene is said to have been laid at Dedham. But the name of almost any other small city or village anywhere east of the Mississippi might have been substituted. Human nature, the saying is, is the same the world over! New Englanders can laugh at themselves when they see themselves caficatured. Special mention might be made of the work of several of the actors in the week's cast. The versatility of both Mr. Remley and Mr. Cordon was convincingly apparent as was the inherent suavity and unassumed "polish" of Mr. Kent. Mr. Chase, as Morton Jones, and Miss Roach, as "Hannah," almost excelled their predecessors in those parts by their conham. But the name of almost any other "Hannah," almost excelled their pre-decessors in those parts by their con-decessors in those parts by their convincing interpretations.

The special "music week" program prepared by Mr. Hector added much to the pleasures of the evening. Songs were charmingly rendered by Miss Suzanna V. Brinkley.

FUND LACK CHECKS TELEPHONE INQUIRY

State Utilities Board Chairman Asserts Need of Adequate Appropriation

That the state Department of Public Utilities is today handicapped because of lack of funds with which to carry on investigations in the interests of the people of Massachusetts, Henry C. Attwill, chairman, asserted yesterday at the resumed telephone rate rise inquiry. He made this statement when quiry. He made this statement when E. Mark Sullivan, corporation counsel for the City of Boston told the com-missioners that in this rate-rise peti-tion by the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company, a comprehensive and thorough inquiry should be con-ducted into all of the company's affairs. Mr. Sullivan had declared that

James M. Curley, Mayor of Boston, proposed to ask the Boston City Coun-cil for money with which to investi-gate thoroughly the New England company in the event of the State's being unwilling to spend money for the pur-pose. He said the city of Boston had spent more than $120,000 in its inquiry into the Edison Electric Illuminating Company's rates and he knew that Mr. Curley did not care to ask the City Council to appropriate more of the people's money unless absolutely

Department in Plight

It was after Mr. Attwill had declared a short recess for conference with the commissioners of the Public Utilities Department that he said that his own department was in a plight because the Massachusetts Legislature had never been willing to give it enough money to support an adequate force for such investigations: He

I feel the commission should have I feel the commission should have enough money and enough men with which to make any investigation which appears to be necessary. It seems much better that the commission do its own investigating for the people than to have to have it done outside, so that the public will see that the investigation is carried on by disinterested people. Even now the commission is in a controversy with the Commission on Administration and Finance over money enough with which to carry on its auditing division.

Samuel H. Mildram, who has conducted what examination the city could in the short time since Mayor Curley filed a remonstrance against the pro-posed increase in charges for private exchange boards and long-distance calls, was on the witness stand yesterday afternoon and insisted that the company could knock off $1,000,000 that it is now charging against depreciation and there would be no reason for asking the increases in rates. Jeremiah F. DETROIT, Mich., May 6 (Special). The Common Council yesterday refused to espouse the cause of beer. rejecting by a tie vote, four to four. a resolution to memorialize Congress for legalization of 2.75 per cent beer. The resolution was offered by Robert Wardell, secretary of the Michigan Division of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. Mr. Wardell vas elected from Detroit to the state Legislature two years ago on a wet platform, which adds significance to yesterday's action.

After two hours' arguments from

Mr. Wardell, and pastors and representatives of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, who opposed the return of beer, the proposal was turned down. Its sponsor's argument that Detroit twice had voted against prohibition failed to convince.

Church workers replied that pro-hibition had done much to uplift Detroit, but that it needed a longer tryout to demonstrate its real benefits.

John C. Lodge, councilman, offered an amendment to delay the vote indefinitely, but it was defeated by the same ballot as was the proposition proper, a moment later.

Mr. Wardell also is sponsoring the circulation of petitions to place the question of modification of the state's dry amendment on the ballot next November. Its avowed purpose is "to permit the State to enjoy the same beverages as the United States Constitution allows." by raising the state alcoholic limit automatically with the federal in case the latter is modified in future. His effort yesterday was toward raising the federal limit, soid was regarded by church enforcement workers as an indication of what might be expected if the state modification

Washington Observations

TERBERT HOOVER has a new right-hand man—a newspaperman suddenly turned govern-official—Harold Phelps Stokes. Until recently, he was Washington correspondent of the New York Eve-ning Post, as well as one of its stockholders. He had a splendid active service record in France during the World War as an officer in General Pershing's army. He succeeds, as Mr. Hoover's assistant, Christian A. Herter who has acquired part-ownership and become joint editor of the Independent, at Boston. For many years an admirer of Mr. Hoover and his methods, Mr. Stokes will contribute real affection, as well as exceptional ability, the post he is about to occupy.

President Coolidge has been enter-taining at the White House a Californian who does not "see red" (or yellow) on the Japanese question. He is Alfred Holman, editor of the San Francisco Argonaut. Mr. Holman's position on exclusion is tersely stated the end which Congress seeks is right, but the way in which it is pro-posed to be done is wrong. He rec-ommends the calm view of the Union Record, of Seattle, an official Labor organ, which recently described Japa-nese immigration as "neither as serious nor as complicated as pessi-mists paint it." Mr. Holman is an unfailing guest at the White House on the periodical occasions which bring him to Washington for trustees meetings of the Carnegie Peace Endowment.

$1,250,000 BUDGET

One-Third to Be Expended Outside United States-Authority of Board Enlarged

Special from Monitor Bureau

NEW YORK, May 6—A budget of $1,250,000 to carry on the work of the National Young Women's Christian Association was passed unanimously at a business session this morning of its eighth annual convention. Onethird of this amount is to be spent on work in foreign countries. ieln liquidate the association's debt of $163.000. He offered to meet dollar for dollar the contributions made at the session today by the delegates on their own account, or for their asso-ciations. In view of this offer, the delegates voted to apply all pledges made today to debt reduction. A way of giving effect to more of the purposes of the association by enabling national board to declare its position on issues affecting the whole country was adopted at yesterday morning's session. An added list of both national and international matters in which, whenever hurried ac-tion is desirable the board may speak for the association, was approved after a full expression of opposing views. As some misunderstanding of the vote of approval seems to have occurred, however, there is a possi-bility that the question may be reopened

By the decision a new list of subjects will be added to those usually studied at the Young Women's Christian Association summer camps and by its various committees. Through these means and with the discussions of the subjects always going on in the local associations, the national board will be kept informed of the opinion of the organization as a whole, so that when any legislative measure comes up in Congress or in a state Legislature it may speak with the full authority of its 600,000 members.

More Effective Method

Miss Henrietta Roelofs of New York City, executive of the rural com-munities group, stated to a repre-sentative of The Christian Science Monitor that the enlarged scope actually only means that the purposes of the association can be made more effective and that governmental means may national relations, will promote world amity and understanding, she said.

The principal objection to the pro-posal came from Mrs. M. F. Freeman of Albany, N. Y., who objected to the board to declare the association's position on such a question of individual opinion as the League of Nations. Her objection was ruled out, however, by the president, Mrs. Frederick M. Paist of Philadelphia, on the ground that the attitude toward the League was to be defined in a resolution of the conven-ought not to commit the association without first sounding out opinion in each case. As the national board consists of 90 members, of whom 60 are usually available for monthly meetings in New York, however, the opinion prevailed that this body was sufficiently representative to act in emergency cases in which there is not time to sound out the opinion of the local bodies. The association expresses its opinion in Washington through the Women's Joint Congres-Committee, so that it

State Health Board Begins Campaign to Repeal Compulsory Vaccination Ban

By a Staff Correspondent

SAN FRANCISCO, May 6-Proponents of medical freedom are noting the import of "smallpox warnings" port its contention that the state law prohibiting compulsory vaccination should be repealed.

The data submitted led to the crux of the whole matter in this follow-up statement by the board:

statement by the board:

The necessity for universal vaccination against smallpox in every community is too well known for further comment here. In order to secure thoroughly well vaccinated communities health officers, physicians, nurses and many others must preach the virtues of this procedure over and over again.

In communities where there is organized continuous opposition to vaccination against smallpox it is difficult to convince persons of the certain advantage in the sure protection that vaccination affords. Perhaps the presence of an outbreak of the disease among the unvaccinated of a community constitutes the best argument in force of the certain development in force of the certain and the control of the disease among the unvaccinated of a community constitutes the best argument in force of the certain against the control of the certain advantage in the munity constitutes the best argu-ment in favor of vaccination, but it costs lots of money.

The Public School Protective League of California, which has done yeoman service for the cause of medical freedom in this State, is expected to block efforts of the vaccinationists to restore this State, is expected to block this form of compulsory medication. The league points out that according to the records of the state board, 80 per cent of the parents of the Cali-fornia school children have expressed themselves as being opposed to vacci

STANDARDIZATION HELD VITAL TO TRAIN-CONTROL SUCCESS

Investigator Also Believes It Futile to Attempt to Carry Out Order in Present Stage of Development

Investigation has shown the futility, in the present stage of development of devices of requiring the 94 rail-roads cited in the two orders of the interstate Commerce Commission to equip 141 passenger engine divisions with train control. Likewise, it has been proved that a certain degree of standardization," or the rejection of They the majority of devices and concentra-tion upon a few types of merit, is not only desirable, but highly essential. Without such standardization, the engines of one road cannot be diverted to another line which is equipped with in their construction, can be relied a different style of train control.

The expense of installation, while undoubtedly exaggerated by the railroads, is nevertheless an item of im-While the Interstate Commerce Commission has stated that the cost of installation on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois was $451 per mile of line, the Rock Island $702 and the Chesapeake & Ohio $1505, the railroads place the charge for their own lines at a considerably higher figure. In the case of the Pennsylvania, this estimate has been set at $6,000,000 for three divisions.

Even at the minimum expense hown by the Chicago & Eastern Illinois installation, the cost as applied to 141 divisions would be prodigious, estimated at $200,000,000.

The railroads are correct in their assertion that for an equivalent expenditure, the elimination of grade crossings would prevent a far greater number of catastrophes than will the universal use of train control. However, there is no definite promise on their part that if the train control order is modified, the sums released will be expended in eliminating grade crossings. And unless the Interstate Commerce Commission is possessed of the authority, as well as the desire, to compel the roads to pursue this policy in return for a modification of the control order, there is no reason to lelieve that any activity will be shown by the railroads along these

The assertion of the railroads that order to discuss with the authorities there the plans for the law faculty which will form the nucleus of the automatic train control is still in the experimental stage is hardly tenable, in view of the successful use of train control for 12 years on the C. & E. But if train control of a type which does not allow the engineman any discretion is ordered, stops will be frequent, expensive, and often of considerable duration, for they may occur to freight trains on heavy grades where it is difficult to start the train without additional motive power.

The train control people assert that the railroads have exaggerated the costs in order to avoid an installation of their device. But it is evident that the colonies into closer intellectual touch. WOMEN OF RUSSIA RISE IN INDUSTRY

Legally on Equal Footing With Men, Their Actual Position Is Inferior, but Improving

MOSCOW April 19 (Special Correspondence)—So far as law and decrees can achieve this end, the revo-lution established equality in Russia. All the disabilities, under women formerly suffered in such mat-ters as voting, holding property, marriage and divorce rights were swept with a stroke of the pen. Soviet Government even risked offending the traditional racial customs of primitive Muhammadan peoples in the Caucasus and Central Asia by forbidding such practices as child marriages and the forcible abduction of

However, it is one thing to decree a vast social change and another thing to realize it, especially in such a country as Russia. Legally on an equal footing with men, Russian women re-mained actually in a position of in-feriority. Illiteracy was much more prevalent among them than among men, and their qualifications as work-ers were usually lower. They have suffered especially since the introduction of the new economic policy be-cause of the state policy of cutting down expenses by dismissing all superfluous workers in Government institutions and factories. In these reductions it is almost always, the

The trade-union work among women is divided into three parts, the liquidation of illiteracy, the establishment of the same standards of work and pay that prevail with men workers and the attraction of women into trade-union work. The trade-unions are now supporting 739 centers for the liquidation of illiteracy. These centers are attended by 23,795 students, of whom 12,857 are women.

The average wage of a Russian woman worker was 47.4 per cent of that of a man in 1914 and 62.8 per cent in 1923. This is due to the fact that women often lack the technical qualifications for skilled work. We try to combat this condition by insisting that a definite number of places in workers' high schools and technical schools be reserved for women. MELBOURNE, Victoria, April 1 (Special Correspondence) - Wheat breeding has been in progress under the Victorian Agricultural Department since 1912. It takes from three to four years to secure crossbred wheats, and at least five years subsequent to that to test them thoroughly. The department has now begun to test them on a large scale under different conditions. This year no fewer than 24 new varieties were tested in comparison with well-known standard varieties. Tests were made of the value of light and heavy dressings of superphosphate on the newer mallee areas.

During the last few years a large number of new crossbred wheats have been produced and fixed by the department. It does not necessarily follow that a wheat which gives good returns in the Wimmera or in the coastal district will also yield well under the dry conditions prevailing in the mal-An these regulations do not embree themselves automatically; it requires constant work on the part of the factory committees, trade-union workers and labor inspectors to see that they are carried out. Hence the suitability of the new crossbred varieties for arid condi-tions could only be determined by ac-

Twenty-four new crossbreds were in competition with varieties commonly grown in the mallee. The seasonable conditions were not highly favorable for wheat production, owing to the very dry weather experienced in October and December. The rainfall from seeding to harvesting was 6.28 inches, of which 4.02 inches fell in June and July. The results were that standard wheats averaged 20 bushels 32 lbs. to the acre and the crossbreds 23 bushels 44 lbs.
The average of the 24 new crossbred wheats thus showed an increase of nearly 15 per cent on the standard varieties used in the district.

The Final Port of Yesterday's Proud "Square-Riggers"

San Francisco Special Correspondence THE ship of the "square-rig," unless she come to an unfortunate end on some uncharted coral bar, or at the mercy of the hurricane, can usually look forward to spending her final years in the cove across San Francisco Bay, known as Oakland Estuary. Somehow that has come to be the resting place of the sailing ships, their final port, their last refuge. And there many of them, wood and steel, disintegrate until their old ribs are immersed in the mud.

It is a pathetic sight, this, to the sailor, to the man who has trod the decks of some of these craft in their virile days, as they sturdily faced a typhoon in the Indian Ocean, or a December gale in the north Atlantic, riding it out "hove to," with a rag of sail on fore and main masts. Oakland Estuary, known far and wide among sailors as "the grave-yard of ships," because so many of the oldtime carriers are winding up their careers there, has a far more interestto face a Cape Horn gale as were the clippers of the '50's.

For it is a sgreat deal more than a final port for worn-out hulks, it is the abiding-place, during their periods "off duty," of most the remaining wind-propelled, square-rigged ships now under the American flag. And to the layman who is being continually told that there are no more, "windjammers," it is a sight as interesting as it is 'unexpected to see at rest in Oakland Estuary during the winter months more than a score of great vessels, lofty of mast and lengthy of yard, vessels of 2000 and 3000 tons, stanch and able, as fit to face a Cane Hurn gale as were the has been changed. waters against submarines. After leaving the tower the liner passes along by the circular forts of Spithead, which are supplied with fresh water from wells sunk down through the floor of the sea. From here onward the way is through a landlocked roadstead. To the left lies the Isle of Wight, to the right the dockyard town of Portsmouth. At one point a clear view may be obtained right up the naval harbor, where, among other things, the masts of Nelson's Victory, the oldest ship in the world, are visible. They may be easily distinguished by the square yards.

Next the liner goes through Stokes Bay, the British navy's torpedo experimental ground, and then the sight seer's interest turns to the Isle of Wight shore.

ROYAL DUTCH AIR LINES THRIVING

Leave Amsterdam at 7, Reach London for Exchange Opening and Get Home for Dinner

THE HAGUE, April 20 (Special Correspondence) - At an interview with Mr. Plesman, director of the Royal Dutch Air Company, the question of air transport as a business proposition arose. At the present time the above-mentioned company runs services via Amsterdam-Rotterdam-London, Amsterdam-Rotterdam-Brussels-Paris, and will start a service via Amsterdam-Rotterdam-Ham-burg-Copenhagen of six hours' dura-

The company has been enabled to carry on its work with the help of big subsidies from the Dutch Government and several big Dutch banks, shipping, and other companies. However, there is a marked decrease of the costs per "flying hour" (the number ally in the air) which is proportionate with the increase of flying hours during a given period. In 1920 the number of flying hours was but 660; in 1921-2591; in 1922, 3880; 1923, 4000, ber of flying hours was but 660; in day service for business men will run 1921—2591; in 1922, 3880; 1923, 4000, and in 1924 the total will probably be leave that city at 7 a. m., arriving in between 4000 and 5000 between 4000 and 5000.

pany to pay was by expansion of the traffic and the routes. When his company could do business in a "whole-sale way," then it would be possible to introduce changes into the management which would secure a fair profit to shareholders. He laid stress on three points which may here be short'y indicated.

In the first place it would then be possible to separate passenger, postal and good transport. For passenger, and good transport. For passenger, very fast, luxuriously equipped planes could be used; for goods, slow freight planes; and for the post. planes of a medium celerity. Considerable saving would thus be made on the working expenses of the service.

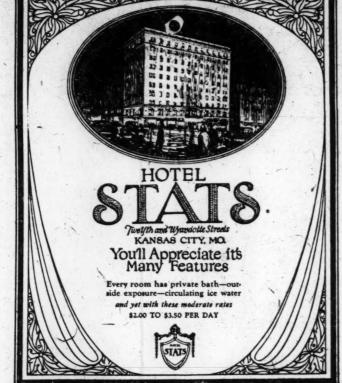

In the second place, the staff needed for repairs and taking care of the machines could work in three shifts covering 24 hours. During the night the planes in use in the daytime could be inspected and overhauled, while at present this must be done in the day-time. Consequently the three-shift system would mean a reduction in the number of machines needed for maintaining a given air-line, and thus the capital of the company would be smaller. The three-shift system, on the other hand, is too expensive as long as the number of machines is omparatively small.

Lastly, Mr. Plesman added that the three-motor planes would also add to the economy of the companies. These three-motor machines would increase the safety of flying and thus encourage the public to use air transport. Besides this, the life of the three-motor plane will be of longer dura-

IVE HUNDRED AND TWENTY times around the world by rail, 82 times around by steamship—this was the amount of travel mileage, for one year, reported by 2396 readers of The Christian Science Monitor. The total rail travel reported was 12,980,000 miles, steamer travel 2,060,000 miles.

These reports were made through coupons published in the Monitor, asking our readers to tell us how much traveling they had done during the preceding twelve months. For the 2396 who responded, the figures show average individual travel of 5417 miles by rail, 860 miles by steamer.

Here, surely, are figures of importance to the hotel, resort or travel advertiser who wishes to reach a particularly interested and responsive group of readers. While all the readers of the Monitor may not travel as extensively as those who sent in coupons, there can be no doubt that among the readers of this International Daily Newspaper there is a high percentage of people who travel extensively, both for business and for pleasure.

These people are discriminating in their selection of accommodations, and are guided, when planning a trip or a tour, by the advertisements in the Monitor's Hotel and Travel pages.

Coupons were received from 47 states of the Union, and from many points abroad. The mileage reported by Monitor readers in the several states, and in foreign countries, is as follows:

Below are given a number of extracts from letters which accompanied coupons, showing how Monitor readers make it a point to give patronage, when possible, to Monitor advertisers.

"In a few weeks I shall write to one of the railway companies advertising in the Monitor about a trip they offer. I always make use of the Monitor in traveling."

"Since September, 1923, have been through about 14 states, during which time have stopped at Monitor advertised hotels, patronized restaurants, railroads and all others using Monitor columns and as usual have had entire satisfaction."

"I looked up the Monitor before routing and seeing advertisement of — I selected that route. . . . I found also that I was coming back over an advertised line, and I will say the trip was very enjoyable by reason of the co-operation with our Monitor. That added to the pleasure."

"We always try to stay at hotels advertised in the Monitor and patronize stores which advertise. We have had uniformly good service."

"In every city or town I have made it a point to stop at hotels, patronize restaurants and shops which are advertisers in the Monitor."

"During my travels for the past 10 years I have always first consulted the advertising columns of the Monitor for railroads, steamships, hotels, restaurants, and stores, knowing that money spent under this guidance would bring entire satisfaction."

"Am anticipating a steamship trip, through a company advertising in the Monitor."

"Would like to tell you that before leaving home I clipped from the Monitor all advertisements of hotels, restaurants and others that I thought would be useful. We found my list most helpful."

"In sending the inclosed coupon I wish to add that I have made the trip from here (San Antonio, Texas) to Boston each year for the last four years. Summer before last I went to Europe on a boat of the _____ line, which advertises in the Monitor, and I returned on a _____ boat, which also advertises in your paper. My mother and father are now on the _____ Cruise, which has been so extensively advertised in The Christian Science Monitor."

"In inclosing the information slip herewith, I want to express my admiration and appreciation for the excellent advertising carried in the travel section. The information given is excellent geographical preparation for a world trip I hope to take in the near future."

"In my travels, I have invariably found the hotels advertised in your paper to be excellent and I have been a guest at probably all of them from coast to coast."

The Mask and Wig Club of the Uni-The Mask and Wig Club of the University of Pennsylvania is an organization of amateurs in the truest sense of the word. It is the best organization of its kind in the United States, and as such deserves full credit for what it has done and is doing. Other college organizations may excel in different fields, but Mask and Wig is head and shoulders above its nearest rival in college musical comedy productions. In many respects, the performances offered by the Pennsylvania boys each year compare very ylvania boys each year compare very avorably with the best shows of the kind offered as regular productions on Broadway. The dancing is often su-

That the boys do their work "for the mere love of it" goes without saying, but there is a real artist in the background who has inspired and directed these performances for the past 29 years. He is Charles Snyder Morgan and the result of his work is as delightful as almost anything to be seen in the theater. The fact that every available seat is sold for every one of the 21 performances in several of the largest theaters and opera houses is due to something more than the fact that they are "just U. of P. boys." The secret is merit and genuine merit at that. Mr. Morgan has the rare gift of being able to impart to his dancers spontaneity and freedom of expression. It is the quality that is found in the work of the Ruth St. Denis dancers and is unfortunately missing in the Madame Pavlowa group. From head to foot the Mask and Wig boys are free—they seem to be made of India rubber and yet maintain a remarkably poised dancing form. They have been set free, pantomimically, by their director and they should be grateful to him. Such an approach to perfect ensemble dancing has not been seen on the New York stage this season.

stereotyped and stale to the big-growing and more intelligent audience of the old theater. Yet the "judicious grieved," even in Shakespeare's time, because of bad acting and overemphasizing; for Hamlet writhed over it in his advice to the players.

The old English-speaking stage—350 years old at least—had formula, tradition and technique which came from large theaters; meager lighting and enlarged playing vocally and pantomimically which was necessary so as to be heard and seen. The writing for the stage, outside of some good poetry, was for the most part bombastic or at least resounding. And with it all grew a technique and method of its own, and also some bigarre personnel.

The old stage was a very difficult art to master—as much so as any other art. Really great artists were just as scarce on it as they are scarce in the other arts today. Only the gifted players in the old plays could give the impression, if it was necessary, that they had just welked in off the street they had in the street sense of drama and production propor A stage director of this kind comes but seldom.

It was all very interesting to me, not only because the play was so well done, but also that I was impressed expression with each other, if not art-impulse coming to the people more so, than our lirect objective atti-

COMMITTEE IN FAVOR OF BILL

Baseball onument in Potomac Park Now Seems Assured Special from Monitor Bureau

WASHINGTON, May 6—A favorable report on the bill to provide for a monument here to symbolize baseball has been filed in the House by the Library Committee. Since the Senate has already passed a measure designed to the same purpose, it is almost a certainty that the flower branch will approve the proposition. The memorial is to be placed in Potomac Park, which contains a large area for athletic events.

Robert Luce (R.), Representative from Massachusetts, an ardent devotee of baseball, as chairman of the Library Committee, filed a report paying high tribute to the national sport of the United States. His report read, in part,

as follows:

In all ages the sculptor has been summoned to embody in stone or bronze the ideals of the people. Thus Greece, finest of ancient civilizations, turned often to the heroes of her games for enduring figures which should stir youth to emulation in those activities that bring health and strength.

To a like end we may welcome the impulse that would place in the Nation's Capital a worthy embodiment of our most typical sport, that which we call 'the national game.' It is the most typical, not simply because it is most played and watched, but because it best reflects the American nature. On the one hand, it has no element of brutality; on the other, no element of effeminacy. It calls for quick, sharp action, the keen eye, the strong arm, the fleet foot, the instant response to critical inacy. It calls for quick, sharp action, the keen eye, the strong arm, the fleet foot, the instant response to critical need, the matching of wits, the cool judgment, the teamplay, and, above all, the friendly, democratic rivalry in the open that Americans most admire and enjoy. To symbolize these things in some fitting work of art is worth while.

INDIANA WINS AT BASEBALL, 8 TO 4

EVANSTON, Ill., May 6 (Special)— Indiana University defeated Northwest-ern University in a "Big Ten" base-ball game here yesterday by a score of 8 to 4. Two poorly handled balls in the third inning gave Indiana its op-portunity to run up a lead that the Purple could not overcome. The Hoos-iers scored four runs, making the count 5 to 1. P. B. Parker '25, first baseman, featured the winning attack with a double and a triple. Coach M. A. Kent's players outhit those of Coach L. S. Mann, both for number of safeties and distance, but the Indian fielding held down the base running. For Northwestern Ralph

ATHLETICS IN CENTRAL EUROPE

Football Seems to Be the Favorite Sport

at Dresden and Leipzic, respectively, and two at Prague.

It is natural that the Czechs should lead the new sporting movement. They are essentially a study race of Spartan habits, and for years their national movement, denied the possibility of political expression, showed itself in the Sokol societies which, in reality were an intense nationalistic propaganda, kept within the law as athletic organizations. When the moment arrived to throw off the Hapsburg yoke and proclaim the Czechoslovak Republic, the Czechs had no ostensibily military forces. But their highly trained and disciplined Sokols took possession of Prague and established a sort of military law throughout the seceding territory.

The Czechs had thus reached a high tary law throughout the second territory.

The Czechs had thus reached a high state of proficiency in general athletics and such sports as swimming and rowing. They turned their attention to football with brilliant success, and not only are their teams excellent exponents of the game, but vast crowds assemble to witness the matches. The English professionals nowadays need to exert every effort if they are to emerge victorious from their encounters. torious from their encounters.

Sport has contributed not a little to the restoration of friendly relations be-tween the central European peoples. At a time when the governments were hostile toward each other the diplomacy hostile toward each other the diplomacy regarded the various races as ready to resort even to armed warfare, Dresden and Vienna football teams would visit Prague, and Czechoslovak elevens would take the field in Germany and Austria, to receive the enthusiastic plaudits of their quondam enemies, and the entertainment of the rival teams provided, even a couple of years ago, an occasion for the expression of amicable sentiments then entirely alien to the political relations between the respective countries.

GERMANY DEFEATS

ROME, Italy, May 6—The Italian Olympic tennis team did not win a single match in the third day's play of the international match against Germany yesterday. Davolas, the Neapolitan champion, displayed the best tennis of the Italian players in his encounter with Rahn, but lost, two sets to three. Colombo, ex-champion of Italy, after winning the first set, 7—5, against Kleinschroth, lost decisively. Playing against the German champion, Rahe, the Italian champion, Sabaddini, won only four games in the first two sets. He appeared from then on to have settled down to his usual steady game, but Rahe's play was superior and he lost the third set, 12—10. In the mixed doubles, the German couple, Boelling and Frau Nepach, won easily in straight sets from Countess Giannuzzi and Sabaddini.

coast, and, therefore, be of considerable importance.

Important changes concern that section of the racing rules which refer to "overtaking, luffing and bearing away." The principal alteration in this section has to do with "passing to leeward." The section headed "passing to windward" is further clarified, however, by the statement that the new amendment overrides the present rule as to "altering course," requiring the boat passing to windward to keep clear. This in reality permits what has been common practice, the privilege of luffing a boat out to keep it from passing to windward. The rule now permits a helmsman to luff practically as he pleases under those conditions.

In reference to "passing to leeward," the present rule is amended by striking out the entire paragraph as previously

The Marconi rig is affected by the new rules and there is an amendment which rules against the curved Marconi mast. This regulation has been made because it has been found impracticable to stay the curved Marconi mast properly.

The new racing schooner of the Marconi type also receives attention under the revision of rules. The racing schooner of the future will be required to have a foresail of reasonable proportions, thus forestalling such unusual rigs as that of the Canadian schooner Venture, formerly the 50-footer Istalena, now owned by Commodore Jarvis of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club. Under the new rig, which she carried last year, Venture had a short foremast and a disproportionately tall mainmast of the Marconi, or jibheaded type. The committee wished to make impossible a freakish rig on a racing vessel which gave it an advantage in sail area over more moderate types.

There are changes in regard to the Marconi mast, which limit the height of the mast both in schooners and sloops, the proportionate height to be arrived at by a formula which is printed in a circular sent to all racing yachtsmen and yacht clubs.

Some changes were made in regard to the management of races, the race committee being given additional authority to combine classes and establish special classes. A change was made to allow yachts of over 25 rating, which includes the New York Yacht Club thirty-footers, to carry one woman guest during the ravigation of the Yacht.

California to Send

10 Men to Cambridge

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 6—University of California will rely on 10 men in its attempt to gain a fourth successive intercollegiate track and field champlonship at the Harvard Stadium, May 30 and 31, according to word received from Coach Walter Christie of the Berkeley athletes. He states in a letter to A. C. Bickford, Harvard, manager of the meet, that the athletes who will come east are Capt. William Neureldt 24, P. S. Boren '24, J. I. Witter '24, Lauren Upson '26, A. A. Jensen '25, A. M. Becker '25, V. E. Dodson '25, Glenn Dodson '26, R. C. Francis '26, and P. S. Barber '26.

Last year, when California led the colleges with 5014 rounts 10 activities of the postponed game from Saturday between W. B. Hill of Lynn, and G. M. Tannee. Those who hold membership in the New York York Yacht Club, are much interested in the changes which have been decided upon in some of the rules of that organization. Vice-Commodore George Nichols, chairman; Charles Francis Adama of Boston: W. Butler Duncan, George A. Cormack, Charles Lane Poorposed the committee on revision, which has been considering the proposed changes for several weeks.

The changes affect the regulations of the club which have been in effect for the past 10 years, and come as the result of suggestions received from many prominent yachtsmen and other yachting associations. It is predicted that the changes will greatly ald in consolidating the racing rules of the Atlantic coast, and, therefore, be of considerable importance.

Barber '26.

Last year, when California led the colleges with 39½ points, 10 athletes contributed. In 1922 nine men ran up 40½ points for the title-winning Bears. When Christie's team first broke through the hitherto impregnable eastern barrier in 1921 by a one-half point margin over Harvard, six Californians scored 27½ points.

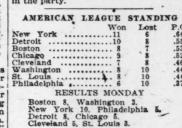

California has scored most of its points in the field events for the past two years, having totaled up 29 points in the discus and javelin out of a possible 60 points since that event was included in the program in 1922. Once again Christie has relied chiefly on his jumpers, weight and javelin men, although Upson, who cleared 12ft. 3in., to win the vault against Stanford University; Jensen, two-miler, and Becker, hurdler, are in the party.

The Met-ropolitan Vickers Electrical Company in England then installed a high frequency receiver and was able, after some experiments, to pick up the Pittsburgh programs and send them out on the regular wave lengths to European listeners. The concert is received at 100 meters at the repeater station, amplified and then sent out through the regular radiocast equipment of the station at the higher wave lenghs.

Distance With a Crystal Set

Far greater elimination of time and distance by radio than has been achieved up to the present is predicted by H. P. Davis of the Westing-house Electric & Manufacturing Company, based on the splendid results that have attended the use of the repeating or re-radiocasting system that have made it possible to receive Pittsburgh in London on a crystal receiver. His plan is as follows:

Radio repeating will make possi-ble the receiving of programs from any part of the globe, with the same

The audible wave transmitter need not have excessive power, so that its operation will not interfere with distant tuning by adjacent receivers, if desired. The inaudible transmitters, however, may be highly powered to give them the ability when necessary to maintain a constant range. As their signals will be transmitted on the inaudible wave length, the power used will not cause interference with receivers.

"Booster" Stations

There will be located at advantageous points, inaudible wavelength repeating stations whose sole duty it will be to receive these inaudible waves from the central stations and pass them along. These receiving stations will act as "hooster" peating stations will act as stations to amplify the inaudible sig-

Certain other stations, and there may be as many of these as desired, will be equipped with short wave receivers with which it is possible to pick up the short wave signals and repeat them on a low power audible wave. These stations which are to serve local districts only, will merely repeat the signals caught on the low wave length and radiocast it for the benefit of the listeners in their immediate vicinity. These local radiocasters, therefore, need only, a small amount of power. This interconnected international system will have a dispatching organization to direct Certain other stations, and there a dispatching organization to direct how and when the various programs of the central stations will be sent and what stations should stand by to handle the program circuits.

Such a system will also need a world-wide and very efficient program-collecting organization. This program organization will be operated somewhat in the manner of the great snews agencies of today, and will continually be on the search for interesting programs from every point in the world.

GAINS SELECTIVITY

Single-Circuit Set Can Be Made a Two-Circuit Tuner by Slight Alteration

Lack of selectivity, the "bugbear" of the single circuit set, is still so much with us, as is evidenced by complaints of radio fans all over the country, par-ticularly those living near a radiocasting station, that a solution is offered today. It is quick and inexpensive to apply, and one that makes the allaround efficiency of the set better. The selectivity is decidedly improved: little if any radiation to disturb the neigh-bors is possible; the set will not be easily put out of tune by neighboring sets, and the tuning will be simplified because varying the antenna length or the changing of conditions in the antenna system will not greatly affect antenna system will not the main part of the set.

The tuning can be calibrated, due to the above, and once a station is found on the condenser dial setting, squeals.

and the rotor plates of the condenser. Using double cotton or double silk covered wire (any size from No. 20 to No. 26 will do) wind six turns around the stator of the vario-coupler at the end where the grid is connected, directly over the regular winding and going in the same direction, and fasten it with collodion. This six-turn coil is shown in the diagram in heavy lines. Now take the lead from the upper end of this winding where the start was made and connect it to the antenna binding post. The other end goes to the ground post, as is shown in the diagram. The set is now a two-circuit tuner with a tickler feedback using an untuned (aperiodic) primary or antenna circuit, the stator of the vario-counler for the secondary or grid circuit and the rotor of the vario-coupler for the plate or tickler feedback circuit. The selectivity comes from the loose coupling and the nonradiating qualities from the loose coupling and step-down transformer action in the path of radiating radio frequency currents. The antenna and lead-in should not be over 90 or 100 feet. This action was explained in detail in yes-

Fortunes Are Made in Romance of Radio

Odor of Doughnuts Leads Cambridge Boys to Affluence

One phase of the romance of radio seldom considered is the rapid growth of this tremendous industry. It has grown so fast that no accurate estimate can be made of the capital invested, persons employed and products turned out.

While there were about 15 manufacturers two years ago, today there are thousands. Naturally thousands of people have profited thereby and a few examples will show to what extent some have gained.

The inventor of the third element in the audion tube was living in a $6 a week room not many years ago. To-day he is very wealthy and interna-tionally recognized as an engineer and manufacturer.

Two men just out of college started a small radio plant over a doughnut factory in Cambridge, Mass., five years ago. The rent was $18 a month. frying doughnuts, yet it must have neers have become nationally known as transformer manufacturers and designers and their business runs over $1,000,000 a year.

AUSTRIA WILL BEGIN RADIOCASTING JULY 1

WASHINGTON, May 6-That Austria is getting on the map radiowise is evidenced by a report received by the Department of Commerce from the Department of Commerce from the American Consul at Vienna to the effect that regular radiocasting is expected to commence in that country on July 1, a concession for the purpose having been granted to a group composed of banks and electrical firms.

The post and telegraph administration will issue radio returns on the basis of the contract which has been made.

WITHOUT FEE UPHELD BY COURT

Decision Repulses Efforts of Composers-Authors-Publishers' Society to Charge for Use of Their Songs statute, according to a decision made recently by Judge Smith Hickenlooper United States District Court in which he dismisses the suit of the Jerome H. Remick & Company, Inc., New York music publishers, against the Crosley Radio Corporation, opera-tors of station WLW, for the radiocast-ing of one of their copyrighted songs.

This is a momentous decision in the radio field and a decided victory for the adiocasters against the efforts of the American Society of Composers, Au-thors and Publishers to make all radiocasting stations pay a fee for the copyrighted music they may radiocast. The memorandum opinion on the mo The memorandum opinion on the mo-tion to dismiss complaint says, in part:

tion to dismiss complaint says, in part:
We simply feel that the rendition of a copyrighted piece of music in the studio of a broadcasting station, where the public is not admitted and cannot come, but where the sound waves are converted into radio frequency waves, and thus, transmitted over thousands of miles of space, to be at last reconverted into sound waves in the homes of the owners of receiving sets, is no more a public performance in the studio, within the intent of Congress, than the perforated music roll which enables the reproduction of copyrighted music, by one without musical education, is a copy of such music.

Previous Case Cited

A private performance for profit is not within the act, nor is a public performance not for profit. All con-template an audience which may hear the rendition itself through the transmission of sound waves, and not merely a reproduction of the sound by means of mechanical device and electromagnetic waves in ether. A parody upon the singing of a copyrighted song has been held not to infringe the copyright (Bloom & Hamlin vs. Nixon, 125 Fed. 977). And by much the same token we think that the rendition of a song in the seclusion of a broadcasting studio and its subsequent reproduction by a radio receiving set, where the auditors are scattered over a vast territory, is not a public performance, within the intendment of Congress in enacting the copyright the rendition itself through the trans Congress in enacting the copyright casters was formed last year primarily to make an organized effort by the radiocasting stations of the United States against this fee demand.

Radiocasting of copyrighted music is one. In an effort to get around the not covered by the present copyright demands of the music publishers the association asked independent publishers to send their works to the various stations, and asked song-writers to send in their manuscripts.

Two-Year Campaign

The best of these were then chosen and were played from all the stations in the association in order to show that radiocasting music helped to increase its sales by making it known to the public at large, and also to en-courage the unknown writer of music in obtaining recognition.

This has been decidedly successful not even attempted to use music published by the society. eliminating all the society's copyright music was a large one and inadvertently one of the Remick numbers was radiocast by Station WLW and this suit followed.

The campaign against the radiocasters started two years ago when members of the society notified studio directors that they could not play certain music unless they announced before each selection that it was being played by permission of the

Although the Brazilian rate of exchange has remained fairly stable during april at slightly under nine milres to the dollar. the present depreciated value of the milres is causing importers to follow a general hand to mouth policy in buying, says Trade Commissioner Embry in a cable to the United in States Commerce Department. In certain import lines, however, marked improvement is reported. The demand for automobiles has increased, with a price reduction, especially in the cities of Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo. Other markets are holding up well but the port congestion of Santps is impeding deliveries of a large number of automobiles tied up there. One leading importer of automobiles reports record in MMM.

CLOTH BUYING IS ON CONSERVATIVE BASIS JUST NOW

Purchases Are Made With Greatest Caution-Some Sales Below Cost

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., May 6 (Special)-Primary cotton goods markets have been suffering this year, just as they suffered last year about this time, from an unwieldy premium on spot and quick delivery cotton.

The cotton future markets have shown a 4 to 5 cent spread between shown a 4 to 5 cent spread between the near-by old-crop months, such as May and July, and the new-crop months such as October or December.

That means that the man who places an order with a mill today to make up a lot of goods for delivery so much per week, beginning in 90 days, has to face an automatic drop of 5 to 6 cents a pound in the value of the goods before they are delivered to him.

The buyer of finished goods for future delivery has the same situation to face, and even the buyer of spot goods knows that his merchandise will have to be slashed mercilessly in price if he does not get rid of it in less than 60 days.

Naturally, purchases are made with the greatest caution, and prices are subjected to the closest scrutiny. Everythe greatest caution, and prices are sub-jected to the closest scrutiny. Every-one is buying on a hand-to-mouth basis, and those forced to sell are compelled to make ruthless sacrifices in value to move their goods.

Light Trading

The trading in gray goods during the last week has been very light, indeed, and in spite of the very considerable extension of curtailment, it is doubtful whether the trading of the week equaled the total reduced production. It has been not only the duck and the print total mills that are curtailing, but also the mills making napped goods, tow-elling, pajama cloths, denims and ticking, and even into such coarse material as osnaburgs and other types of textlies, made wholly or partly from waste. It has been estimated that considera-

It has been estimated that considerably more than 25 per cent of the spindles of the entire country are either wholly or partially idle, and in some centers, such as Fall River, production has fallen below 25 per cent, i. e., more than 75 per cent curtallment.

Yet prices have shown no sympathetic upward swing. There have been enough of the smaller southern mills so placed between a body of workers to whom they consider they owe a living, and a financial position which would be seriously threatened by a shutdown, that they feel compelled to keep their plants in operation.

by the creation of $7,500,000 of 7½ per cent first preferred stock.

The capital as now authorized consists of $10,000,000 prior preferred stock, divided into two series of $7,500,000 7½ per cent stock and $7,500,000 of per cent stock and $7,500,000 of per cent stock and $7,500,000 of per cent stock and $20,000,000 second preferred stock and $20,000,000 second preferred stock.

Unable to borrow further money to pile up unsold goods, they have had to sell a certain amount each week, no matter what the price, in order to raise enough funds to meet their payrolls. It is nothing to be surprised at, therefore, if the prices they have accepted have netted a substantial loss. The mills themselves admit they are selling at a net loss of from four to seven cents a pound, yet they continue to run in the hope of early improvement.

Selling Below Cost

Selling Below Cost

Selling Below Cost

It was such quarters as those just mentioned that were responsible for the sizable sales of 38½-inch 64x60s in the last few days at 8½ cents. a yard. This is only a little more than 45 cents a pound, and sheetings, also in large quantities, were bought on a basis of 43 cents a pound, neither figure being sufficient to cover the actual cost of manufacture and material. Other constructions were priced somewhat on the same basis as these two.

The Fall River mills were quoting on a basis of 9 cents a yard for 64x60s, but could not move much at this figure. There were only 30,000 pieces sold the whole of last week, acording to reliable estimates, and most of this 30,000 was composed of low count 36-inch constructions, with occasional small lots of sateens.

In the fine goods division of the market the mills reported a fairly good demand and the trading was in larger volume than the week previously. Prices, however, were very close indeed, and most of the orders were of the quick delivery kind. There was an encouraging interest in fancies and novelities, and this was the only type of goods on which it seemed to be possible to get a fair price. The fine goods mills are running against very stiff competition from English goods of similar character, and the volume of imports has been so large that both manufacturers and workers have joined in ufacturers and workers have joined in appealing to the President for a special duty to cut down the flood of imported fine cottons.

Yarns have been so dull and weak that most price quotations are considered only nominal. A firm bld even at a marked discount from the market would be very apt to find a taker. For that reason there are very few firm bids, and those southern spinners who are forced to sell some of their piled up stocks to get ready money have been compelled to cut their asking quotations very materially.

Experienced merchandising.

Experienced merchandising factors in the market are quite frank in saying that little improvement in the volume of demand can be looked for before July expires as a future month in the trading The mills are continually trying to dispose of their surplus goods on hand, and this outflow of goods, it is believed is sufficient for the immediate needs of the country.

GOOD ADVANCE IN PRICES OF

ADVISED TO HOLD FOR HIGHER PRICES SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, May 1 (Special)—With 40 cents a pound offered for Utah wool, the majority of the growers are holding for higher prices, at though there have been a few sales under 40 cents recorded.

As has been customary, many of the growers are waiting for the Jericho, Utah, wool clip to be sold. A bid of 45 cents a pound has been made for this clip but the growers have refused the offer. Last year it sold for 51 cents.

The Jericho clip is estimated at 1,000-700 pounds. The sale of the clip in past, years has been the barometer for prices generally hereabouts. In most instances other clips have sold for a few cents a pound less. The Jericho clip in year is pronounced by John T. Caine, extension animal husbandman in former seasons.

Mr. Calne expressed the opinion that the wool would undoubtedly bring a satisfactory price this year, and that him of the price paid the storage of the wool for sale at a later date.

A comparison of yield bases on which French Government issues are selling with yields of other European government issues suggests that even at present prices French issues are out of line. Compared with a yield of about 8.18 per cent for French 8s, the 8 per cent bonds of the Republic of Czechoslovakia sell at present to yield only .06 more, and Republic of Finland 6s, yield 1.13 less.

NEW FINANCING IN APRIL SMALLER BUT IS ABOVE NORMAL

New financing slowed down in April compared with last year, but was still above normal. The total of bonds, notes and stock issued was $297,919,655, compared with March and $304,682,620 in April, 1923. The total for four months of this year was $1,231,447,700, compared with $1,524,955,885 in the corresponding period of 1923 period of 1923.

In addition to corporation financing. American bankers offered in April $30,000,000 Switzerland external 5½ per cent bonds. Rotterdam $6,000,000 external 6s and Carlsbad $1,500,000 external nal 6s and Carlsbad $1,500,000 external 8 per cent bonds.

Although some issues put out in April carried coupon and divided rates at 7 per cent and 8 per cent, the tendency was lower, and there was an unusual number of offerings at 5 per cent and 5½ per cent, reflecting easier money.

Among the largest offerings in April were Pennsylvania Railroad $20,100,000 equipment 5 per notes, Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Company $25,000,000 6 per cent stock and Southern Pacific Company $17,649,000 5 per cent notes. Pacific Gas & Electric Company sold $12,500,000 5½ per cent refunding bonds and Canadian Pacific sold in Canada $12,000,000 5 per cent bonds.

Less Acreage In California

Pres. R. Walter Leigh's statement to stockholders follows in part:

In California where there had been reduction in beet acreage for the last several years, indications, to Feb. 1, were most favorable for a substantial increase—at least 50 per cent—over the acreage and tonnage of last year, but, due to continued lack of rainfall, greatly below the average for the last 50 years, below the average for the last 50 years, the production of sugar by the Oxnard factory this year may be somewhat less than that of the preceding campaign. In Colorado and Nebraska, the acreage confacted to date is greatly in excess of last year, and it is expected that with continuation of present favorable weather and moisture condivorable weather and moisture condi-tions, the plants at Rocky Ford, Colo., and Grand Island, Neb., will warrant capacity runs and that the increased production of sugar by these two plants should offset and decrease production

Increase in 1923-24 Output

The domestic beet sugar production for 1923-24 was 790,000 long tons, or 17,698,000 bags of 100 pounds each, as compared with that of the previous year of 602,000 long tons, or 13,499,000 bags, the smallest output since 1911.

Of the present year's production, 567,-000 long tons, or 12,709,000 bags, were sold to March 31, 1924, leaving 222,000 leng tons or 4,972,000 bags for sale which will be required in the territory of the Mississippi River and west.

Ends Successful Career

Tonight, at the Savoy Hotel, in London, Sir Arthur Goldfinch, who has been in active charge of the British-Australian Wool Realization Association, or, as it has been called for short, the "Bawra," gives a farewell dinner to the executive staff of the association and to the bankers, selling brokers, and buyers, who have been concerned in their several capacities in the disposal of the surplus war stocks of wool held for joint account of the British Government and the colonial wool growers, most of the wool having been sold on a share-and-share-alike basis.

With the close of the Liverpool colonial wool auctions last Friday, the work for which the "Bawra" was constituted came to an end. At this series of two days, there were offered 44,800 bales which were sold at prices fully on a par with the previous auctions.

The British Disposal and Liquidation Commission, which financed and controlled the colonial wool clip during the war, bought, altogether, 9,895,000 bales of wool, including sheepskins and pelts, divided as follows: Australian, 7,326,000

On Jan. 1, 1921, when the "Bawra" took over the surplus stocks then left, there were 2,663,723 bales of wool and sheepskins. This wool has now been sold in its entirety. The association, under the management of Sir Arthur Goldfinch, has been exceptionally successful.

Recently some £27,000,000 had been handed over to the British Exchequer and rather more than that to the Dominions, under the profit-sharing arrangement. Altogether, it was estimated at the end of 1923 that the profits would amount to £64,000,000.

FOREIGN FINANCING IN AMERICA IN 1924 MAY TOTAL $750,000,000

NEW YORK, May 6—Foreign financing in the local market this year probably will total three-quarters of a billion dollars. To date, the total of foreign bonds floated in this market is $280,000,000, with probaby another $100,000,000 being extended in the form of bank credits.

The recent reduction in the local federal reserve rediscount rate will, it is believed, permit American banking syndicates to compete on more favorable terms with London bankers. The chief foreign loan in prospect is the reparations loan to Germany, which is expected to total $200,000,000, half of thich probably will be offered in this country.

RETAIL MOTOR DEALERS EXPECT NEW RECORD WEEK

DETROIT, May 6-Reports received

DETROIT. May 6—Reports received by automobile companies from dealers throughout the country indicate a marked improvement in retail sales, particularly in sections where road conditions and weather have improved.

While actual figures will not be available for several days, indications are that last week will show the largest retail deliveries of any week this year; however, weather and poor roads continue an impediment to sales, particularly in southwest and southeast.

the best week of the year in retail sales in the week ended April 19. The following week was practically as good, and indications are that the week just ended will show an increase. Chevrolet's April production was 33,757 cars and trucks, and the May scnedule has been set at 37,000 cars. In April last year, Chevrolet produced 36,000 cars, and in March, this year, 46,226 cars.

Dodge Bros. expects last week to compare favorably with its record week, which was the week ending April 19, when retail deliveries were 6000 cars.

The Paige Detroit Motor Company, reports the largest week in its history. The week just ended showing an increase over the corresponding week last year, which had the previous record for retail sales. Since the first of the year retail deliveries of Paige and Jewett cars have exceeded the corresponding period last year by 24 per cent.

In the week ended April 26 Hupp Motors reduced dealers stocks by about 400 cars, and the week just ended is expected to show further reduction of

Expansion of public improvement programs throughout the country this spring was reflected in an increased volume of state, county and municipal bonds marketed in April, when a new 1924 monthly record of $121,295,680 was establihsed.

The total exceeded that of the cofresponding month in 1923 by $32,000,000. Despite the heavy flow of these securities into the market, the demand has been well sustained and prices gradually have advanced since the first of the year.

STRONGER TONE NOW DISPLAYED IN SHOE MARKET

Buying Orders Reveal Sold Out Conditions in Some Factories

Nothing reveals positive conditions in the mercantile world quite so accu-rately as a direct demand upon the re-sources of manufacturing plants. Shoe buyers in particular are uncovering the fallacy of much of the pessimism heard for early shipment.

today in the shoe market when buying for early shipment.

One of the country's largest shoe manufacturers is so well sold up that no new accounts are solicited and late orders from its regular clientele are not promised delivery sooner than July 15. Similar conditions exist in some of the smaller factories, but there is still inactivity in several grades.

The modiste seems now to have an undisputed influence over ladies' shoes, and it is the excessive labor cost resulting from following closely every new design that has kept the working forces in that condition of unrest so detrimental to the financial interests of all parties concerned. But besides this there is nothing in the supplying markets to cause apprehension, and prices for the coming season are practically kets to cause apprehension, and prices for the coming season are practically the same as listed last winter. Excellent Values Offered

Probably more value is being offered by makers of men's shoes from the top grades down to heavy work shoes than ever before, pre-war days not ex-cepted, a condition quite indebted to the superior wearing qualities of the substitutes for both leather soles and heals but as far however applied only substitutes for both leather soles and heels, but so far, however, applied only to street and rough service shoes.

Samples for the season opening in June are already lined up for early buyers. The road salesmen are starting on their semiannual itinerary this month. All things considered, the present outlook is promising.

Oak sole leather tanners speak confidently of the future and though book.

Oak sole leather tanners speak confidently of the future, and though bookings during April were below the average a snappy small lot business is going on. Prices are unchanged.

Union offal has a steady demand with shoulders not over abundant. Bellies, all weights, are in active demand, top grades taking precedence.
Calf skin tanners report new business as small. Though quotations are unchanged, the trend is toward easier rates due to price concessions in the packer raw skin market.

Unper Leather Men Cautlous

Upper Leather Men Cautlous

Side upper leather tanners are booking new business daily, but there is a determination not to exceed ordinary requirements. The demand seems to stay close to the cheaper grades.

Elk sides, in their newer shades, are active and prices would doubtless yield to offers involving large lots. Chrome sides are kept on the move by the steady demand for limited quantities, most of which shy at the higher grades. Bark and combination tannages are much in evidence in heavy shoes for hard service, and a brisk demand during the fall run is practically assured. The finer buck finishes have a strong position in footwear and a steady call is expected.

position in total partial position in expected.

Pauent leather tanners are still running their plants at capacity, and a continuance is well assured for the balance of the year. Though hide prices may favor the tanners somewhat, the steadiness of the demand for shiny leather keeps quotations steady, and on some grades strong.

some grades strong.

The limited demand for glazed kid seems to have no improving trend. Demand centers in the cheaper grades. Fashion has turned its back upon it, so exploiting the better skins is a hopeless task. However, prices on the sort that sells are firm with a bit more margin on such stock as is shipped abroad.

The World's Great Capitals

= The Week in London =

By Cable from Monitor Bureau London, May 6

ONDON is at its fullest. The King and Queen are in residence and the social season is at its height. cal crisis after another, through which however the Labor Government has so far managed to hold its own. The Conservatives plan a further grand assault next Monday when the tariff question comes up. The Liberals who were defied last week when the Government refused George Buchanan, one of the Clyde Labor members is then to introduce.

"Labor prefers rebels to cabbages," is realized that 800 omnibuses, with a "Labor prefers rebels to cabbages," was one of the expressions used by Colonel Josiah Wedgwood, Chancellor ish Labor Government, in the course of a spirited address he delivered at Hackney, London, recently. To make a man it was not enough, he said, to have the raw material. There must be the labor of thought and the inspiration of spirit. There must be sympathy with others. "There must be hope, a belief indeed in the gradual perfectibility of human nature. If that be doubted we should look back and see how far we might yet go, once we eliminated the fear of being tram-pled underfoot." He discribed "Permission to work, permission to pro-duce what we need," as the "corner-stone of justice and freedom." That these precepts should be put forward by one in Colonel Wedgwood's posi-tion as a representative of the Labor Party is noticeable proof of the dis-tance the British Labor Party has al-ready traveled toward recognition that there are two sides to every question. * * *

The experiences of a woman can-didate for Parliament was the subject of an address given here by Lady Terrington, Liberal member for Wycombe, on April 9. It was hard work, she said, rushing round the constituency trying to turn out an opponent, but being in was one of the most delightful duties that any woman who meant to work could take up. The more women got into Parliament, she added. the more women's and children's questions were going to be pushed. If they could get something like a hundred women members they would be able to get many measures through that were long overdue. She urged fathers and mothers to go together to political meetings to find out which party was going to do the best for the name is now familiar at Sotheby's auction rooms, is apparently still prepared to expend thousands of pounds on books which have grown valuable by reason of their age and the small num-ber of copies known to book lovers. That he expended some £50,00 re-cently at the sale of a portion of the Britwell library seems only to have whetted his appetite for more. At another Sotheby's sale of books from private libraries, he gave the sum of £2400 for a little pamphlet of quarto size consisting of 10 leaves only. The value lay in its rarity, as only two other copies are known, one of which is in the British Museum and one in fifth, the following special prizes were awarded:

First brilliancy prize (silver cup from W. M. Vance of Princeton, N. J. and $75 in gold from Albert H. Loeb of Chicago) to Richard Reti of Czecho-slovakia for his game against Bogoljubow.

Second brilliancy prize ($50 from Abb Landis of Nashville, Tenn.) to Frank J. Marshall of America for his game against Bogoljubow.

Third brilliancy prize ($50 from Abb Landis of Nashville, Tenn.) to Frank J. Marshall of America for his game against Bogoljubow.

Third brilliancy prize ($50 from Abb Landis of Nashville, Tenn.) to Frank J. Wembley Exhibition and one which will probably be overlooked by many visitors, will be that which plays its part before the visitor sets foot inside the grounds, namely the wonderfully

Main lines with their trains drawn by steam locomotives, electric suburban surface lines tube railways, part surface and part Parliament is the scene of one politi- underground, tramways, bus routes and charabanes-all have been drawn into the service. The time taken to reach the Exhibition grounds from the center of London varies from 40 minutes to 25 minutes by rail and more of course, by tram and bus. The London General Omnibus Company has made an entirely new departure by installing eight omnibus loading platto support their proportional representation bill, are considering whether they will retaliate next Friday upon the Home Rule Bill for Scotland which in which busses for the different parts forms, and a tip has been taken from capacity of 40,000 passengers, will be running on the roads to the Exhibiof the Duchy of Lancaster, in the Brittion and the station will be able to deal with some 20,000 passengers per A remarkable profit-sharing venture has just been completed by a London firm. The steamer, "Londoner," a cargo-boat of about 600 tons, was beached in the Thames after a collision last January, and was patched, re-floated, and dry docked at Limehouse. It was proposed that she should be temporarily repaired and then towed to Holland for permanent repair, but rather than send the work out of the country, the owners of the dry dock decided to take the risk of buying the vessel and repairing her with a view to resale. The staff and workmen, including apprentices, were given the chance of subscribing 50 per cent of the purchase price. The amount was forthcoming within a week. The ship was repaired and sold to a Norwegian

Views on Easier Money

In its weekly letter the Harvard Economic Service says: Bond prices have Improved substantially during the past six months, very largely in response to easier money conditions. In their major fluctuations, bond prices move inversely with money rates, and this relationship has obtained in their recent movements.

The outlook is for the maintenance of bond prices as something like the present level during the next few months, with a possibility of some further advance. With business proceeding in its present volume, and bank loans at their present level, it is hardly possible that interest rates should undergo such a major decline as to result in another major upswing of bond prices.

The decline of our speculative curve in the face of easy money conditions has reflected the uncertain business and political outlook; but the reduction of New York rediscount rate and recent signs of stabilization in certain commodity markets have changed conditions somewhat abruptly.

The situation disclosed by present con-

ons somewhat abruptly.
The situation disclosed by present con-

attions in the security and money markets suggests that we are now in an intermediate stage of the business cycle, in which a succession of intermediate fluctuations without the development of boom or depression conditions may be in prospect. n prospect.
On the last day of April the Federal Reserve Bank of New York reduced its ediscount rate to 4 per cent. This action reflects the recent ease of both call and time funds in New York, and will probably lead to reductions in other reserve districts. Its immediate effect on busi-ness is not likely to be very great, since money conditions have had nothing to-do with the recent recession of prices and activity. As a long-run influence on "the constructive side," a 4 per cent

How Poets Make Sense Out of Sound

As I look through the new maga-derive from water in all forms. In zines of verse, which are excel-"The Princess" he pictures lent experiment stations for recording all sorts of new devices, designed to register new effects, I observe with interest the efforts of the printer to make the vehicle carry the meaning more completely. Here'are extraordinary effects which bear the appearance of willful chaos: words run together, zigzag lines which look like jigsaw puzzles, sometimes abandonment of all punctuation and capitals, words broken in two at the ends of lines, and all the rest of it.
These bizarre departures from convention, I read in a current review, are proofs of "the cunning competence, of "the cunning competence, the modern understanding of the tech-nical demands of art." It may be so. But I find it hard to keep abreast of these "technical demands" however sympathetically I strive. And I find myself examining afresh the more traditional forms of poetry.

As a result of my comparisons I am forced to reaffirm the conclusion that the adaptation of sound to sense is not perfected by these artificial and strained tricks of typography, but by the observance of the inherent rules of language. That the thought may be assisted materially by the proper anassisted materially by the proper appeal to the eye I cheerfully agree. But the primary appeal of poetry is not to the eye but to the ear. If, therefore, the sound values are not adequately adjusted, no factitious appeal to the eye can avail.

Some of our contemporaries, I fear, forget this simple fundamental law.

They forget that we had great poets before the invention of printing; and that our manuscripts of verse before fifteen hundred commonly did not even distinguish between verse and prose, and often, in fact, did not even space het ween words. Such simple facts may give our typographical poets e. They remind us that the true poet in all ages instinctively selects sound which reflects or conveys the sense.

our own literature Tennyson probably stands supreme in these ex-quisite adaptations. We all recall the now classic example of the actual reproduction of sound,

The moan of doves in immemorial And murmuring of innumerable bees.

"The Brook" adds to reflection of actual sound the masterly communication of movement.

I chatter over stony ways,
In little sharps and trebles,
I bubble into eddying bays,
I babble on the pebbles.

Tennyson, in fact, has supreme ability to impart the sensations which we

> He is equally the master of the pervasive suggestion of emotion and mood. In his very first poems he revealed this gift, as in the lines from "Claribel":

At eye the beetle boometh Athwart the thicket lone.

And other poems, such as "Mariana" and "The Ballad of Oriana," confirms his possession of it.

Everyone is familiar, also, with Poe's famous and illuminating descrip-tion of his choice of sounds to achieve the effect of awe and melancholy in "The Raven." To me his calculating selection is too coldly deliberate, and renders the result little more than a tour-de-force. Quite another kind of metrical feat is the actual exemplification in poetic lines of the effects described. Of this the incomparable example, classic in more than one sense, is the passage in Pope's "Essay on Criticism"

The sound must seem an echo to the Soft is the strain when Zephyr gently blows, And the smooth stream in smoother numbers flows;

But when loud surges lash the sounding shore, hoarse, rough verse should like The the torrent roar. When Ajax strives some rock's vast weight to throw,

The line too labours, and the words

Several later poets have been fas-cinated with the same concrete char-acterizations of the various kinds of prosodic movement. In a delightful jeu d'esprit called "Metrical Feet: Lesson for a Boy," Coleridge wrote:

In the Hexameter rises the fountain's silvery column
In the Pentameter still falling melodious down;

and of the hexameter.

Strongly it tilts us along, o'er leaping and limitless billows. Nothing before, and nothing behind, but the sky and the ocean.

So also Longfellow illustrates the movement of both hexameter and pentameter:

For as the wave of the sea, upheaving in long undulations, Plunges loud on the sands, pauses,
and turns, and retreats,
to the Hexameter, rising and singing, with cadence sonorous.

the Pentameter flows.

Falls; and in refluent rhythm back but the recognition, highly deliberate, albeit quite sincere, of the technical from human contact. Thriving best wonders of their art. The truth is, on some barren coral shore they fratof course, that in all genuine poetry, to ernize with hot tropical sunshine and a more or less marked degree, sound echoes sense, but generally not so expressly as in the foregoing examples. The correspondence lies rather in the appropriateness of the metrical pators of romance are these denizens of tern, of diction, and of the whole tone contemporaries grasp this immutable law the humbler and the better poets they will be.

P. K. "Clear and Gentle Stream"

> Clear and gentle stream! Known and loved so long That hast heard the song, And the idle dream Of my boyish day: While I once again Down thy margin stray, In the selfsame strain Still my voice is spent, With my old lament And my idle dream.

Where my old seat was Here again I sit, Where the old boughs knit Over stream and grass A translucent eaves; Where back eddies play Shipwreck with the leaves And the proud swans stray. Sailing one by one In their chosen pool.

Many an afternoon Of the summer day Dreaming here I lay; And I know how soon. Idly at its hour, First the deep bell hums From the minster tower. Creeping up the glade, With her lengthening shade Of her brightening moon.

-Robert Bridges

Convictions

Seek with study and with prayer for the most clear and confident convictions; and when you have won them, hold them so largely and vitally that they shall be to you, not the walls which separate you from brethren convictions than who have other yours, but the medium through which you enter into understanding and sympathy with them, as the ocean, which once was the barrier between the nations, is now the highway for their great poetry were with Wordsworth tions, is now the highway for their never-resting ships, and makes the whole world one.—Phillips Brooks, in Basil De Sélincourt, in "The English Secret."

THERE is no tree in all the world so spirituelle as the coconut palm. These graceful creatures seem to hold themselves aloof from mundane existence, independent of the All this, on the part of the poets, is nutriment of rich moist soil, and apart from human contact. Thriving best

Two Great Poems

While on I walked, a comfort seemed A heart that had not been disconso-Strength came where weakness was Like an intruder knocking at the door Of unacknowledged weariness. What a model of expression is this for our latter-day introspectionists!

And is their vision, which we will not compare for depth with Wordsworth's, One of the most astonishing experiences we get from The Prelude connects itself with the frequent allusions in the style to the style of Paradise Lost: with such tricks as the double negative in "melancholy not unnoticed" or the transposition of unnoticed" or the transposition of phrases like "the world was all before them." It might have been supposed Wordsworth's instinct, having regard to the difference between his theme and Milton's, would have been to avoid any possibility of compari-son; or did he see that, if only be cause the difference was so great, there was no danger? However it came about, the surprising thing is mind, and that, in page after page of marvellous achievement, The Prelude sustains it. Wordsworth is a poet who stumbles and lails, shitten is not. But Wordsworth took the experiences of a Cumberland schoolbo ton scaled with demons and arch

angels. After all, The Prelude does not live in passages; it lives in its large flights. When we have felt the sweep of these, and when, having risen with them, we reflect upon the delicacy and power of their impetus,

AMIDST all the disillusionment that has taken place in Europe since the war there is one transcendently hopeful

Signs of the Times sign, and that is the widespread re-examination of Christianity as the possible solution of the public problems of our time. Before the war Christianity as such played but little part in the political life of the nations calling themselves Christian. Religion, of course, was a factor in public life, as it always But its influence took effect in the form of political strifes between the followers of different organized "Christian" denominations, rather than in open debate as to the true meaning of Christianity as applied to social problems. Thus the great educational struggle in Britain in 1906 and 1907 was mainly a contest between the point of view of the so-called Nonconformists and that of the Church of England. In France the battle was between those who wanted the Church of Rome to maintain its predominant influence in church and state, and those who regarded clericalism as the principal enemy of progress and freedom. Elsewhere political parties were largely based upon the religious affiliations of the peoples. Denominationalism, rather than Christianity, was the active political power.

Today there is an immense change. Denominationalism as such is much weaker. Perhaps it is because the general failure of the Christian churches to satisfy the demands of humanity in its great agony has forced these churches to a healthy consideration of their own weaknesses rather than to a zealous attack on those of their rivals. Perhaps it is because the human mind is demanding something more hopeful and more satisfying than the shallow panaceas of the politicians or the barren controversies of the theologians. Whatever the cause, it is certain that a widely different note from any that sounded before the war is beginning to be heard in the public life not only of America but of Europe as well.

In France there is a whole literature growing up to prove the hollowness of human pleasure, the futility of expecting satisfaction from the victories of armies or the triumph of nations, and looking to religion as the great emancipator. In Germany men are searching desperately into philosophies and religions, many of them of a very exotic kind, for relief from the intolerable pressure of post-war conditions. In Italy the strength of the underlying current, despite the triumph of Fascismo, is seen to the discerning eye equally clearly. Over Russia still broods the anti-religious despotism of the Bolsheviki, but every traveler tells of the religious revival which is going on beneath the surface.

In England the movement has made further progress into active public life than elsewhere in Europe. The recent "Copec" conference on the application of Christianity to political, economic, and social life, attracted very wide attention and discussed most of the uppermost problems of today in a practical and in no denominational way. Mr. Ramsay MacDonald and Mr. Lloyd George have both recently testified that only in the Christian spirit will the world find the solution of the political difficulties which beset it. Mr. Baldwin has said that Christianity is the only road. And not only have the leaders of the three great parties borne testimony to this truth, but great numbers of the rank and file are beginning to do so too.

Only a few days ago a remarkable manifesto was published from five young Conservative members of the House of Commons which contained these words: "We believe that the world is governed by moral laws which are as certain in their operation as what are called the laws of nature. These moral laws are the reflection of the character of God as revealed in the Christian religion. If men neglect God and the moral law, the fact of God will remain, though they and their civilization will perish." And starting from this premise they went on to plead that the only basis for social progress was better individuals—"if the ideals of the individual are brotherly, spiritual, and high, they will be reflected in a better social order"—and they urged that more attention be paid to religious truth in education and various aspects of public life.

Verily these are all signs of the wonderful times in which we live. The surface of the life of the world is troubled. Never, perhaps, has turmoil and discord been so world-wide. But underneath, the leaven of a truer and a better interpretation of Christianity is directing the thoughts of more and more people to the only road by which the personal and the social problems of mankind can be solved. And when that process has gone a little further and the body of understanding Christian conviction has been enlarged, we shall see blessings coming to humanity of which it now can scarcely conceive.

IN ASSERTING that "the worst thing we have in this country is the Congress," Judge Gary of the United States

Steel Corporation is following a

A Dangerous Practice Steel Corporation is following a bad example set by many prominent business men, and, it is to be regretted, by many leading newspapers. That the National Legislature of the United States is composed chiefly of second-rate politicians, who are incapable of legislating wisely upon important public issues, seems to have become the accepted belief of the leaders in finance, industry, and trade, and their criticisms of congressional action, or inaction, too often display a willingness to ignore the fundamentals of representative government established by the founders of the Republic. Scolding, fault finding, and belittling comments on the honesty and intelligence of the national senators and representatives are all too common, and serve no useful purposes.

The same attitude is too often taken by newspaper paragraphers and cartoonists, to whom the Congress appears as an obstructive body of incompetents, who must be driven by the "big stick" of a strong executive. Coming with a mandate from their constituents, the members of the Senate and House may be fairly supposed to better understand the wishes of those who elected them, and upon whose votes they depend for re-election, than can an editor or cartoonist residing perhaps 3000 miles away from the constituency of the man or men criticized and ridiculed. To ascribe a refusal to vote in accordance with the wishes of certain great financial or industrial interests to stupidity or partisanship, as is too often done, accomplishes nothing for sound legislation in the interest of all the people.

Various societies, professing to teach American patriotism and respect for constitutional government, are engaged in educational movements to create a public sentiment favorable to the perpetuation of American ideals and institutions. All the good work that might be done by these societies is largely neutralized by such ill-considered statements as that of Judge Gary, since the only inference that can be fairly drawn from them is that the duly elected representatives of the American people are an injury to the country. If that were true, then the millions of voters who elected them are equally dangerous, as it is their votes that choose the senators and representatives in the Congress. If an attempt is made by the great captains of industry and finance to discredit the Congress, it should be remembered that the criticisms leveled against its members apply also to the men and women who elected them. If the Congress is a failure and an injury to business, what does Judge Gary think of the American people by whom it was elected?

What is assumed to be the considered answer of the Administration at Washington to the appeal of the Filipino people for immediate independence is found in the plan worked out in a bill introduced in the House of Representatives by Chairman Fairfield of the Insular Affairs Committee. No mark of official approval has been placed upon the measure as yet, but it is claimed that the proposal embraces all the essentials of the declared attitude of President Coolidge and his advisers toward the problem. By the adoption and acceptance of the plan, there would be authorized the formation of what would be known as the Commonwealth of the Philippines, which would at once become as nearly an autonomous government as the present progress of the Filipino people and the political and territorial conditions in the Pacific are deemed by the proponents of the plan to warrant.

A Thirty-Year Protectorate

It is against the restrictions or reservations imposed, evidently with a desire to safeguard the liberties to be vouchsafed, as well as the welfare of the Government which has for so long maintained a friendly protectorate in the islands, that the zealous champions of complete Filipino independence have protested. It cannot be denied that these reservations, while they may be regarded as necessary and vital, do curtail in no small degree what otherwise would appear to be quite generous concessions. It is proposed that there be set up in the Philippines a complete system of republican government, with the proviso that it be and remain under complete control of the United States for a period of thirty years. At the expiration of that time, the people of the islands would have the right to determine by referendum whether the commonwealth should be continued or whether they should assume complete independence.

It is provided by the bill that there shall be held, when the Government is established, a constitutional convention, composed of members elected by the people, to draft a Constitution, which in turn shall be submitted to the qualified electors for approval or rejection. This Constitution, it is directed, shall provide for a representative republican form of government, with the executive power vested in a Governor who shall be elected by the people, the legislative power vested in a Senate and House of Representatives, and the judicial power vested in the courts. But in the bill of rights which it is provided shall be made a part of the Constitution is this clause, revocable only with the approval of the Congress of the United States:

All citizens of the Commonwealth shall declare allegiance to the United States, and citizens of the United States shall have the same civil and political rights as citizens of the Commonwealth.

Possibly to such a provision there would not be serious objection. But there are further restricting clauses which may not be so readily accepted. It is provided, for instance, that trade relations in the Commonwealth shall be governed exclusively by the laws of the United States: that no foreign loan shall be contracted without the approval of the President; that tariff acts and acts affecting the currency and coinage shall not become effective until so approved, and that foreign affairs shall remain exclusively under control of the United States. In addition, the right of the United States to maintain armed forces in the islands must be recognized, and provision is made for the appointment of what is to be known as a Resident Commissioner who shall represent the United States. It may develop that to the proposed reservation of power to be exercised by this official there will be stubborn resistance, as it is provided that this commissioner shall have authority to suspend laws passed by' the Legislature which, in his opinion, "might result in a failure of the new Government." Appeal from his decision would be to the President.

A sympathetic analysis of the proposed plan does not disclose in it much of promise in the way of propitiation. It is in support of their claim that an autonomous people can express and enjoy independence only when exercising the unrestricted right to pass laws which their own experience and wisdom dictate, that Filipino delegates have insisted upon a more liberal grant of authority. Independence, they might reasonably insist, is independence in name only when it is hedged about by reservations which permit the nullification of such legislative acts by a superior authority or the representative of a superstate.

YESTERDAY'S vote by which the upper house of Congress rejected the Mellon income tax rates and approved

Democratic Tax Schedule Adopted those proposed by Senator Simmons of North Carolina, demonstrated the unique process by which a legislative body organized and nominally controlled by a Republican majority can be dominated and its important action dictated by the minority.

The substitution, on the floor of the Senate, of the tax schedules favored by the Democrats and insurgent Republicans and Farm Bloc senators, for the rates approved by a majority of the Senate Finance Committee, is a direct blow at the Administration and an action clearly in opposition to the expressed will of hundreds of thousands of American voters who have indicated their preference for the so-called Mellon plan.

The way seems paved now, with the attitude of the House of Representatives made unmistakably clear by the vote recorded several weeks ago, for the final passage, so far as congressional action is concerned, of the measure which no doubt will be agreed upon in conference. Until the contrary is proved, it must appear to many who have attempted a thorough study of the economic aspects of revenue legislation that the rates agreed upon by the Senate are not sound. Two apparent weaknesses exist. One is the adoption of the 40 per cent surtax maximum in place of the 25 per cent maximum rate proposed by the Administration's bill. Another is the lowering of the rate on incomes of $4000 or less to 2 per cent instead of to 3 per cent as provided by the Mellon plan.

Two important considerations have been consistently urged by the advocates of the Republican measure. One of these is the necessity, from an economic standpoint, of inducing capital which is now seeking tax-exempt investments to enter constructive producing industries. This can be done, as Mr. Mellon has so convincingly pointed out, only by lessening the penalty upon incomes earned in the industries. The second contention is that no system of taxation is sound which fails to provide by adequate taxation for the ordinary economical cost of government. Convincing tables have been submitted to show that a 2 per cent tax on the lower bracket of individual incomes will not produce sufficient revenues.

A comparison of the several schedules proposed with that adopted by the Senate, and which probably will be the basis of the conference plan, is interesting as indicating the weight of the influences which controlled in both the Senate and House. The Simmons plan, adopted by the action of the Senate yesterday, fixes the normal rates at 2 per cent on incomes up to $4000, at 4 per cent between $4000 and $8000, and at 6 per cent above $8000. Surtax rates start at I per cent on $10,000 and graduate upward to 40 per cent on amounts in excess of $500,000. The House plan was for normal taxes of 2 per cent up to $4000, 5 per cent on incomes between $4000 and $8000, and 6 per cent thereafter, with surtax rates of 11/2 per cent on $10,000, graduated upward to 371/2 per cent on amounts in excess of $200,000. The Mellon plan proposed a normal rate of 3 per cent on $4000 and 6 per cent thereafter, with surtax rates beginning at 1 per cent on $10,000 and increasing to 25 per cent on amounts in excess of $100,000. The present law levies 4 per cent on $4000, and 8 per cent above, with surtaxes beginning at 1 per cent on $6000, graduated upward to 50 per cent on incomes in excess of $200,000.

A wide variation is shown between the rates fixed by the Senate and those existing under the present law, as well as those proposed by the Administration bill. Those who are convinced that the substitute schedules are unsound feel that it is useless to experiment with a plan which must be altered or amended when it is proved unworkable. The conviction remains that politics, rather than sound economic considerations, has tipped the balance in favor of the measure which a minority vote has adopted.

Editorial Notes

A LETTER to The Times of London, published under the caption "Christianity and War," points an issue regarding the relationship of true religion to hostilities between nations which challenges refutation. It refers to a statement reported to have been made by Lord Parmoor at Birmingham, in the course of which he urged that "Christian truth and Christian principle" are wholly irreconcilable with war. "May I be permitted to point out," says the writer in question, "that the Government of which he (Lord Parmoor) is a member is at the moment experimenting, and at the sacrifice of animals, in order to make its poison gas more effective, and this in spite of the fact that Great Britain ratified the Washington Conference condemning the use of poison gas. I feel quite certain that there is no prospect for peace ahead, and no hope for our civilization, while its-politicians who are in theory wholly on the side of peace can consent to a practice that must end in war."

+ + + OF PARTICULAR interest to those who have been watching the progress toward general acceptance of the Einstein theory was the statement made by Dr. Charles E, St. John, the noted solar physicist of the Mt. Wilson Observatory staff at Pasadena, Calif., concerning his spectroscopic investigations during the last few months and their relation to the third "prediction" of Professor Einstein. "This 'third effect' predicted by the Einstein theory," he declared recently, "the gravitational displacement of solar spectrum lines and its proof or disproof, has been the center of great interest, because among the mathematical physicists whose opinions carry great weight there has not been complete agreement. Einsteinsays the theory stands or falls, according as the displacement exists or not; these latest results, which I have been able to obtain at Mt. Wilson, show that it does exist in the amount predicted by him,"

Songs of Eastern Workmen

By BRUCE HOPPER

"Aiyo," sings Strophe at the pilot end of the bamboo carrying pole.
"Aiyo," pipes in Anti-Strophe at the rear, in lower pitch, but tuned nicely to the barber-shop minor of the leader.

The cadence is instinctively set, and then it is:

Aiyo, aiyo, Ann-hur, yo-hur, Aiyo, aiyo, Ann-hur, yo-hur. . . .

In a moment the great unwieldy load of merchandise, a bundle of iron pipes from a foreign ship, a tier of rice sacks, or the side of a frame house, swings down the street to the rhythmic song of syncopated coolie labor.

The scene could be nowhere but China, where the laborer still rejoices in his work. In China Labor wears a smiling face. When that part of the world was made it was ordained that the land should ring, not to the epic, but to the lilting catch of these coolie symphonies. Every foreigner along the Yangtze has heard the hymn of the carrying pole, and the cadence of the chanteys sung at the foot pumps in the rice paddies.

The Chinese coolie endows his work with rhythmic power. His physical efforts are syncopated to make the work easier and more pleasant. No matter what he is set to do, he does it in tempo, and, like the gleeman and madrigal songster of old, he is never at a loss for a ditty to fit the job in hand.

The chants and rhythms vary with the kind of motion necessary. The sailor of the old tea clipper had a heave-ho for every duty on the ship, making fast at the capstan, hoisting the mainsail, getting under way, and so on. And the Chinese coolie has his repertoire of rhythmic measures for rowing a boat, spearing a fish, or just moving baskets about the go-down.

Perhaps the most interesting extemporary songs are to be heard along the Yangtze, where the trackers, after the manner of the Volga boatmen, test their strength against the force of the current, in hauling the heavy junks upstream. They sing of the joys of life in the towns they visit, of their love affairs, and of the treacherous water god, Shen-Shui, whose mighty voice threatens them in the roar of the rapids and the suck of the whirlpools. But most of their rhythms are meaningless, and serve only to keep time.

Foreigners in China have erected great buildings which require pile-driving for the foundations. On such a job the coolies pull and slack to:

Aiyo, aitso, annyo, Aiyo, aitso, annyo, Ai—yo, ai—yo, hun-ah, Aisto, hun-ah, Hun-ah, hun-ah. . . .

The hammer plunges downward at each beat, and only when the pile is driven home does the song cease. As these coolies work in a public place they are generally watched by a curious crowd. The chief coolie often picks out a conspicuous figure among the bystanders, and starts an extemporaneous ballad on that person. The flavor of the song is seldom complimentary, and the subject of it soon vanishes, followed by the ribaldry of the Chinese.

De luxe travel in the interior of China is by sedan chair, which is borne by two, three or four coolies. The motion of the chair is not unlike that of a torpedo destroyer in a rough sea, but it must be endured to save "face." The chair-bearers move along with a slouching trot, going twice the distance traveled by a mule caravan in one day. They are a sturdy lot, with feet of iron, as the Chinese roads are paved with nothing but good intentions. They break the rhythmic march every few minutes to change shoulders. The leader sings out "Ban-co!" The chair comes to an abrupt stop. The shift is made in three beats, when they all cry "Ho!" and the march continues without losing the tempo. The "Ban-co!" of the chair-bearers is the most familiar sound of the road in China.

At first the foreigner cannot distinguish between the tweedledee and tweedledum of the coolie songs. But the rhythm is contagious and enjoyable, even in the early hours of the morning. Newcomers have been known to protest. One group of foreigners in Ichang attempted to enforce an ordinance forbidding coolie songs. The entire Chinese population joined in a boycott, so that even the servants deserted the foreign quarter until the ban was lifted.

When the first Pharaohs drove their slaves to build the pyramids there was singing on the Nile. Those songs persist today. Great-bodied fellahin, built like Titans in bronze, operate the shadufs to raise the water of the Nile to the dry fields of cotton and wheat. All day long floats the song of the shadufs over the Nile, lifting, always in rhythm, always musical.

One must go to the East to hear the song of Labor. There the coolie syncopates his work, and finds enjoyable a life which to Western workmen would be intolerable slavery. Of all the lessons the West may learn from the wise old East this is perhaps the most timely: hewing the wood and drawing the water are not unhappy occupations if man but gives Labor her ancient dignity.

The Films a Century Hence

A MOVIE in every home is the prophecy of David Wark Griffith, famous producer of motion pictures, who in Collier's peers into the future of the film industry. "One hundred years hence," writes Mr. Griffith, "I believe, the airplane passenger lines will operate motion-picture shows on regular schedule between New York and Chicago and between New York and London. Trains, which will be traveling twice or three times as fast as they do now, will have film theaters on board. Almost every home of good taste will have its private projection room where miniatures, perhaps, of the greater films will be shown to the family, and, of course, families will make their albums in motion pictures instead of in tintypes and 'stills.'"

"By the time these things come to pass, there will be no such thing as a flicker in your film. Your characters and objects in pictures will come upon the screen (which by then may not even be white, and certainly may not be square, or look anything like what it does now), and they will appear to the onlookers precisely as these persons and objects appear in real life. That much discussed 'depth' in pictures, which no one as yet has been able to employ successfully, will long since have been discovered and adopted. The moving canvas will not appear flat, but if a character moves before a fireplace you will recognize the distance as between the character and the fireplace. Likewise, in landscapes, you will feel the proper sense of distance. Your mountain peaks will not appear to rise one on top of the other, but will appear exactly as if you stood and looked at them. Of course these are merely details that will require long and intense study and experiment, but they will come. In other words, from the standpoint of naturalness, motion pictures 100 years from now will be so nearly like the living person or the existing object pictured that you will be unable, sitting in your orchestra seat, to determine whether they are pictures or the real thing."
